There's never been a better time to visit Indianapolis. The capital city is filled with special exhibits and events at top attractions such as the Indianapolis Museum of Art, which has a Mini Golf game about Indiana culture for the anniversary, historical sites, Children's Museum, Zoo, and the Speedway. 01 of 08 Marcia Frost Newfields -- A Place For Nature And The Arts is so much more than an art museum so plan at least a day there to see everything. It's been around since 1883, making it one of the 10 oldest art museums in the nation. In addition to the many art collections that range from Picasso to local painters, it's also home to the 100 acre Virginia B. Fairbanks Art & Nature Park and the Lilly House and Gardens, which includes views of the famous LOVE sculpture by Robert Indiana. 02 of 08 Marcia Frost Indianapolis continues to bring in an array of fine chefs and unique restaurants into the fold, taking advantage of the fresh local dairy, meat, and produce. Georgia & Reese's has real Southern cooking - including fried chicken and all the trimmings - to Indiana's capital. Jonathon Brooks creates sweet and savory dishes, such as a chorizo & manchego Dutch pancake, at Milktooth which varies its menu based ingredient availability. Indy has also welcomed The Chew host Michael Symon, who opened B Spot. 03 of 08 Blue Indy Green is blue when it comes to Indianapolis. Blue Indy is a car-sharing company using electric cars. Indianapolis has the largest program in the nation of its kind with 200 cars (eventually there will be 500). These cars are electric and offer free, guaranteed parking, with pricing at a low cost. 04 of 08 Davei5957/Getty Images As the capital of Indiana, Indianapolis is filled with historical markers you should plan to visit. Monument Circle is the first stop. In the center is a spectacular sculpture by Bruno Schmitz, created at the turn of the 20th century representing civil war figures, including then Indiana Governor Oliver P. Morton. While in Indy, stop by and visit War Memorial Plaza, which includes a museum that exams the history of the American military, beginning with the Revolutionary War. Indianapolis also houses memorials to World War II, as well as the Vietnam and Korean wars. Continue to 5 of 8 below. 05 of 08 Indianapolis Children's Museum The Children's Museum of Indianapolis is one of the largest of its kind in the world. It's five floors of interactive fun and learning for families to enjoy. Among the most popular exhibitions, check out Beyond Spaceship Earth, Take Me There: China, and Dinosphere. Also save time for the "Hot Wheels, Race to Win" experience. 06 of 08 Marcia Frost Spend a day at the Indianapolis Zoo and you'll not only have fun, but you'll also learn about the animals, their habitats and their future. The zoo houses everything from birds in the Flights of Fancy Pavilion to elephants in the Plains. The Indianapolis Zoo is also home to the Simon Skjold Center for Orangutan Education, where you can learn all about these smart creatures, who were welcomed to this world recognized educational center. 07 of 08 Getty Images When it comes to state parks around the Midwest, White River is one of the most inclusive and unusual. It literally is a vacation spot of its own. Within the 250 acres, you'll find the Eiteljorg Museum of American Indians, a canal with gondolas, Indianapolis Indians baseball, and the Indiana Cultural Trail. The White River State Park also has plenty of trails for biking, walking, and hiking, concerts, Shakespeare performances, and festivals. 08 of 08 Marcia Frost The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is the site for one of the world's most famous car races, the Indianapolis 500. This Memorial Day weekend race, which has been running since 1916, is not the only thing that happens here. Throughout the year, you can catch additional car - and motorcycle races, or just come for a visit and a tour on a non-racing day. Here is a useful list for travelers asking why they should visit Scandinavia. As a travel destination, Scandinavia offers a beautiful wilderness with glaciers in the north, forests, and lakes in the south. The cities are interesting, clean and attractive, and serve as a great destination for every kind of traveler! 02 of 06 Giuseppe Milo/Flickr/CC BY 2.0 Scandinavia's capitals offer history, metropolitan atmosphere, combined with tradition and an open-minded welcome to all visitors. The capitals below are wonderful travel destinations for every visitor in the mood for interesting Scandinavian city life: Stockholm, Sweden Copenhagen, Denmark Oslo, Norway Reykjavik, Iceland 03 of 06 PeopleImages / Getty Images Scandinavians love to celebrate outdoors, especially in the warm summer months. Not a weekend goes by that does not offer an event in Scandinavia. Take a look at Scandinavia's monthly calendar to find out what's happening during the time you will be there! Another useful resource is the list of annual holidays and festivals to find out if celebrations might have an impact on your travel plans. 04 of 06 Lauri Rotko/Folio Images/Getty Images Europe tends to have the reputation of being expensive...but that can be changed easily nowadays. Saving money on your next vacation in Scandinavia with these tips WILL save money on your next trip: Top 10 Tips to Save Money in Scandinavia. You might just be able to stay a few days longer for your money. There are also numerous free things to do in each city! Continue to 5 of 6 below. 05 of 06 CrazyD / Getty Images Yes, basically everyone in Scandinavia speaks English! All Scandinavian children learn English in school. However, everyone appreciates if you try to utter a few words in one of the Scandinavian Languages, which you can do easily. 06 of 06 Harald Groven/Flickr/CC BY-SA 2.0 Take a look at the Scandinavia Maps and the driving distances in Scandinavia to see how close some destinations can be. You can even see two destinations on the same day by driving or flying from one city to another in the neighboring country, the distances are so short. It is amazing how a couple of hours in the car can take you from one country into another and a few more hours, yet another. For public transportation, check online schedules beforehand and if you are traveling on a weekend, make sure to look at the weekend schedule since those schedules are often only a fraction of the weekday service of buses and trains. All in all, several modes of transportation are available to travelers, each with their own pros and cons. Paris is always a good idea. But what to do in a city with so much to offer? Not even if you and your friends are all young and healthy, not even if it's "just one friend," not even if "it's OK if I get sick, that's a chance I'm willing to take," not even if "we'll be careful and wash our hands, promise!" We are in a middle of a pandemic, living in a country that has screwed up its response in just about every imaginable metric. The initial test we developed didn't work. The virus was spreading for weeks in Washington state before someone figured it out. Meanwhile, the response from the current administration has been slow and haphazard, with states being forced to take preparations into their own hands. The U.S.'s response to this pandemic has defied every prediction in the worst possible way, a delay that is going to cost lives. How much worse this pandemic will get depends on all of our actions. Yes, our actions. That includes you and me and your friends and your parents and your neighbors, all of whom need to do their part to flatten the curve and keep the hospitals from getting overwhelmed. Doctors and nurses are depending on people staying home, in order to keep them safe, so that they can work to keep us safe. They deserve our respect. As stressful as this is right now, the grim reality is we are at the beginning of the pandemic, not the end. The worst has not yet arrived. We still don't have enough tests. We are running dangerously low on personal protective equipment for healthcare workers. We don't have enough ICU beds and ventilators for a surge in cases. We must all do the hard work of preventing this from spreading further. Our doctors and nurses are on the frontlines, risking their lives, in order to keep people from dying. They don't have enough resources. They are already making unimaginable decisions about how to care for patients without the proper protective gear. Hospitals are already being forced to make plans for who would get a ventilator and who wouldn't, in the case of a shortage. If this keeps up, doctors will have to make decisions about which patients will get a ventilator and which ones won't, because there won't be enough for everyone. Meanwhile, Italy has already been forced to ration ventilators, and they have more hospital beds per capita than we do. Doctors and nurses are depending on people staying home, in order to keep them safe, so that they can work to keep us safe. They deserve our respect. More importantly, they need us to stay at home. That means no visits with friends. Even if you feel healthy, you can still get others sick, and even being young doesn't mean you won't develop severe complications. Physical distancing is hard. Physical distancing is lonely. There are so many new restrictions on our lives, so many comforts we've had to give up, so many celebrations that we've had to postpone. People have canceled birthday parties, graduation ceremonies, family reunions, once-in-a-lifetime vacations and weddings. For all of us, our normal activities have come to a screeching halt, and we've had to forgo the rituals that comfort us, just when we need these friendships more than ever. We are all in this together. For us, that means staying home.
